Portents Fight With A Maniac.

Wm. H. Brown, an inmate of the Western asylum, cut his throat and also stabbed an attendant named Thomasson Saturday night. Brown went into F. H. Johnson's room, a trusty patient, and took the knife out of his pants pocket, about 10 o'clock at night, Johnson having retired. The room was very dark, and with the knife he would rush at everyone that would put in an appearance. Thomasson seized him and received an ugly cut in the abdomen. He knocked off everything brought to bear upon him, by Drs. Stone and Smith, cutting at them all the time and cutting at his own throat at every opportunity until he had gashed it in a horrible manner, and severed the jugular vein, which caused instant death. Coroner Allensworth held an inquest Sunday and the jury brought in a verdict of suicide as the result of an unavoidable accident. Brown's home was at Cullen, Union county, and he was admitted at one o'clock the same day. He was a man of giant stature and muscular and fought like a demon.

Drs. Stone and Smith, who went to the help of Thomasson, had close calls as Brown narrowly missed cutting them several times. They got hold of him but he was so bloody they could not hold him. Thomasson is not fatally hurt.

Freight Conductor Killed.

Capt. Ed. Link, one of the most popular conductors in the service of the L. & N., was run over and killed by a train last Thursday night. The accident happened at Guthrie. About half past ten, Capt. Link was making a coupling. His foot slipped and before he could extricate himself the wheels struck him. The engineer was signaled by a brakeman for a quick stop, but it was too late to save the unfortunate man. His body was cut in two. When first reached by the people who witnessed the accident, the conductor was alive. He was taken to the Grant hotel and died about half an hour later. He was about 30 years old, a married man, and a brother of W. T. Link, proprietor of the well-known Link hotel at Nashville.

An Expensive Discharge.

Last Friday, Dave Broadie, who was tried before Esq. T. M. Barker, at Bell, on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon and disturbing religious worship. He was fined $25 on the first charge and $20 on the second. Broadie furnished the necessary bond, repaying the debt for six months, and was released from custody. Mr. J. B. Allensworth, of this city, represented the commonwealth in the case.

Howell News.

HOWELL, May 4.—[The election on the prohibition question in this precinct, passed off very quietly to-day resulting in an overwhelming victory for the dries, the vote standing 108 dry to 57 wet. The election will prevent the sale of whiskey here for three years longer and our people feel highly elated over the result of to-day's election.]

A Narrow Escape.

CHARTON, May 5.—David E. Bowles was coming to Crofton this morning in his buggy, his horse run away and made kindling wood of his buggy. Bowles was dragged some twenty or thirty steps and bruised considerably, but not seriously hurt and is able to walk around. The horse got scared at the buggy top.

They Want Dry.

The vote on the liquor question taken in Lafayette's magisterial district Saturday resulted in a victory for the "drys." At Lafayette the majority against liquor was 85, while Howell gave a two-thirds vote 108 to 57. There are only two licenses in effect in the district and they will expire during the year.

Police Court News.

Judge Hanbery disposed of the following cases yesterday: Ed Long, cutting and wounding, dismissed; Mack Wright, breach of peace, fined $30; Wm. Coleman, p. v. dismissed. Five cases were continued.

The School Census.

Esq. Alex Campbell, has completed the white school census of the city for 1895. There are 1010 children of school age, 473 males and 537 females.

Cut out the Cancer.

Dr. A. J. Ashly, the cancer doctor, amputated a cancer from the breast of Mrs. John Hall, of the Manioton neighborhood last week that weighed 18 ounces. Mrs. Hall is now, we learn, able to be about her household duties.

RUSSELL AND GALBREATH

Hot and Close Election for School Trustees.
—One Change in the Board.

The election of school trustees for the white public schools of Hopkinsville Saturday was the most spirited contest of the kind ever seen in the city. A determined effort was made to defeat the re-election of Messrs. J. D. Russell and R. H. De Treville and the attempt was successful in part. The opposition ticket had upon it the names of Messrs. J. B. Galbreath and W. H. Faxon, and the contest was opened with the announcement by the workers that the issue was to be a change in the management of the schools. This brought out a number of active workers who had grievances against Prof. Dietrich, the superintendent, and it likewise brought into activity many friends of the school who were opposed to any effort to interfere with its present management or to embarrass Prof. Dietrich in his work with an unfriendly board of trustees. The old ticket at once forgot to the front on this issue, which it turned out was being used without the knowledge of Mr. Galbreath. As soon as he heard of it he declared that he was not running to antagonize Prof. Dietrich, that he was warmly in favor of the superintendent, and that he was not taking part in his own contest and declared that he was making the race upon his own merits at the request of friends. Mr. Russell also conducted his own canvass and by noon Russell and Galbreath were about 40 votes ahead and the race was moving along quietly and the voting appeared to be about over, about 250 votes having been cast. But about 2 o'clock a full force of workers again took the field to overcome Mr. Russell's lead and elect Mr. Faxon. Mr. Galbreath having by that time run far ahead of all the candidates. This fight was so fiercely waged that about 200 more votes were brought out and Mr. Russell was hard pressed when the polls closed at 4 o'clock. He was re-elected by only seven votes.

There were nearly 500 votes cast, the result being: Galbreath, 284, Russell 232, Faxon 225, De Treville 181. The two first named were elected. Messrs. Faxon and De Treville did not re-elect. The highest vote in any previous election was in 1893 when J. E. McPherson received 234 votes, W. W. Clark 208, Joe McCarroll 207 and Ira L. Smith 175. In 1894 there was no contest and less than 100 votes were cast. Two women, Mrs. Owen, and Mrs. Cooper voted for the new ticket. The election was conducted in a pleasant and good humoredly conducted and no bad feeling was engendered so far as we have heard. As it was a "dog fall" for the two tickets, both sides seemed satisfied. Mr. Galbreath qualified at the regular meeting that night and Mr. Russell was re-elected as president of the board.

DEMPESEY LEADS.

Richardson a strong second and the Others Bunched in the Rear.

The mass conventions of Saturday in twenty-seven counties of the thirty nine in the First railroad commissioner's district have been heard from. Dempsey gets Butler, Henderson, Hopkins, LaRue, Logan, Mublenberg, McLean, Ohio, Union and Webster—76 votes. Richardson gets Davies, Christian, Barren, Metcalfe, Monroe and Todd—52 votes. Moore gets Caldwell, Crittenden and Hancock—15 votes. Morrow gets McCracken, Carlisle and 44 votes in Graves—19 votes. McElroy gets Simpson and Warren—20 votes. Miller gets Calloway and one half of Graves—141 votes.

Trigg goes unopposed but will probably be for Moore or Miller. The counties not heard from are Ballard, Breckenridge, Edmonson, Fulton, Grayson, Hardin, Hart, Hickman, Lyon, Livingston, Meade and Marshall. Half of these are in the First district and will go to Moore, Miller or Morrow. The others are likely to go to Dempsey, Richardson or McElroy. Dempsey has Warren after McElroy, 14 votes. Mr. Dempsey has a strong lead but may not be able to save himself from the combinations that are usually made against the leading candidate. Richardson will probably have about 60 or 70 votes and be a strong second to Dempsey. He carried Daviess, receiving 108 votes more than all the other candidates together. In a convention of 300 at Henderson he was beaten only 7 votes, the result standing: 151 to 145.

There are 277 votes and 139 will be needed to nominate. The convention will be held at Owensboro May 15, to-morrow week.

THE CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

The local convention was organized by the election of M. D. Brown, chairman, and W. R. Howell, secretary. It instructed for Richardson without opposition and was in session but a few minutes. About 50 delegates were appointed to Owensboro.

LATER DETAILS.

THE MYSTERY CLEARED UP IN THE GORDON-BROWN TRAGEDY.

Gordon Knew of the Meeting—Interpreted Letters—His Story of the Struggle—Brown's Desperate Fight Wounded and Killed.

The mystery surrounding the Gordon-Brown tragedy in Louisville was cleared away by developments subsequent to our last report. Gordon discovered the infidelity of his wife through letters addressed to his colored servant girl which he gave to Mrs. Gordon for the girl. According to Gordon he never suspected his wife until a little over a week before. For some time letters had been coming to his office, in the Columbia building, addressed to "Miss Parolee Mitchell, care of Merchants' Advice, Columbia Building, Louisville, Ky."

His wife inquired so particularly about these letters when they failed to come, regularly that his suspicions were aroused and he opened one of them. He then had his wife watched and knew when she sent the telegram to Brown. A friend helped him in the matter.

When Arch Brown met Mrs. Gordon on Fourth avenue last Tuesday, Gordon's friend saw them. He followed them to West and Madison and then to Tenth and Green, where he telephoned to either Gordon's office or to another point where the latter had agreed to wait. The import of the message was that the guilty pair had been traced.

Gordon met his friend at Tenth and Green and the two went to West and Madison, where the house, to which the woman and Brown had gone, was pointed out. Before Gordon left his friend to enter the house he promised that he would do nothing rash and it is said insisted that he was wholly unarmed. The only reason he wanted to go into the place, he said, was to verify his suspicions and show his wife that he was cognizant of her unfaithfulness.

Gordon, who is still on the verge of insanity, was able to tell his story by degrees last week. He said his ideas were to wait below and confront his wife with his knowledge of her guilt and asked the boy how long he supposed the couple would have the upstairs room. He said they generally staid all day. He then sat down to think it over and heard them talking and later walk across the floor to the door. He saw them bed was. He thought he heard his wife call her companion "Bob."

He didn't know what to do, and decided to write a note to "partie" upstairs, thinking he might induce him to come down. He then began the note which was found in the hall, as follows: Dear Bob: I want to see you. But he was so unstrung that he could not finish it.

Gordon then became desperate and went upstairs and knocked on the door. Brown opened the door and he forced himself in and the struggle began. He claimed that Brown, during the struggle, got his pistol from an open satchel and fired two of the shots, and this is hardly true. Gordon must have fired at one or broken Brown's arm. The critic in discussing this point says: From all the circumstances attending the killing, it seems plain that Gordon fired the first shot, and that Brown never had a chance to reach his pistol. After Gordon had emptied his revolver, he secured Brown's pistol, which was in an open valise, and fired four more bullets into his body, saving one shot for his wife. The papers have had a good deal to say about whether Brown showed any courage and whether Gordon was the first to fire.

The conditions of the case showed conclusively that Brown had fought desperately for his life and that Gordon with equal desperation gave him no show. It was not a desperate two men equally matched. It was a death struggle between the enraged husband on one side and his wife's paramour on the other, and it was no time for fair play or giving equal chances.

This view of the case is borne out by the fact that eight wounds were found on Brown's body. The ball through the door was the one that went through his ear, as the direction showed went from the bed, where the struggle took place, and was carried on. The other two shots were fired at Mrs. Gordon. One hit her and the other missed her as she ran down the steps mortally wounded. There were but ten shots and Brown could not have fired any of them, as his eight wounds showed.

Gordon's trial was set for to-day, but he may not be at the trial, as he is in bad shape mentally and physically.

A Small Assignment.

W. B. Rhoades, dealer in general merchandise at Ironton, Trigg county, has assigned. Liabilities about $1,000; assets considerably less.

FAIRHAVEN'S PET DOG.

He Aided the Police in Quelling a Riot.

It is the favorite of the Police of Evansville, Ind., and has been the faithful helper of the police in many a riot.

There is a dog in Fairhaven, Wash., who by a resolution passed unanimously by the council of that city is exempt from taxation. All other dogs are liable to ordinary canine so long as they live. He is not a handsome animal, and his name is not indicative of good breeding or respectability. They call him Hobo, and he has but one eye. His left hind leg is almost useless, and his body covered with the scars of many a conflict. In some spots his hair will never grow again, and his under looks like an old fur garment that has been the home of moths. But his heart is right and he has retained the respect of the entire community ever since the labor strike up in the Puget Sound country three or four years ago.

Nobody knows where he came from, says the Chicago Record. They say that he drifted in with the tide of humanity that flowed that way when everything was prosperous. Now he has become a homeless wanderer. He lived in the street until he became famous, and since then he has made his home at police headquarters, where he is treated with the greatest consideration. There is no dog in all the country that has more friends than he, and his behavior is such as to indicate that he wants to keep calm. During the labor troubles there was a narrow escape from a riot. Several thousand railway laborers of all kinds gathered in the street and passed resolutions to go to work and burn the town, and they gathered in one of the principal streets to listen to the incendiary talk of a man who had come to do so. The leader of the mob was a worthless, drunken fellow who had never done a honest day's labor in his life so far as anyone could tell. He had a gift of gab, and spent most of his time making speeches to the strikers and stirring them up to mischief.

It was he who persuaded them to march in the destruction of the city. The chief of police was a brave fellow, and when one of the patrolmen dared go into the crowd and arrest the agitator he decided to do so himself. He forced his way through a mob of more than a thousand men, and when he reached the drunken orator by the collar, jerked him out of a doorway box from which he was speaking and said: "Come along with me." A thousand men were drawn, a thousand men had stones or bricks or clubs in their hands, and the very police stood alone against them. But he eluded the collar of the prisoner and tried to drag him along. Then came the riotous and indescribable excitement. A suffian arose before the chief of police and ordered him to release the orator, and when he declined started to attack him, but when a huge dog seemed to spring out of the earth. No one noticed him before, and no one saw where he came from. Providence sent him to deliver that mob and he did it. With a roar like that of a wild beast he sprang at the throat of the ruffian who was interfering with the chief of police and fastened his fangs in his flesh. There were tremendous outcry and confusion. Everybody was shouting for the policeman to release the ruffian from the dog, for the two were rolling over and over in the street, covered with blood and dust. This continued for some time, and then the crowd began to slip the crowd with his prisoner and slip him into a hack, which drove hastily away before they were missed.

The man was finally released from the dog, but not until he was so badly bitten that he had to be taken to the hospital, and with many kicks and cuffs and bruises from clubs and stones the enterprising brute managed to get out of the crowd. But his diversion broke up the mob and drove the ruffian into the hands of all thought and plunder, and they did not stop talking about the incident for several days.

It is a good instance of the peculiarities of human nature that the mob gave the dog more sympathy than they offered to the man, and from that time there was nothing but good for him. They tried to teach him to drink whiskey and beer, but he always refused, and while he accepted the attention of the "bought" with dignity, he kept his distance and remained with the law-and-order party to the end.

Crucifix for Indian Babies. When you go through an Indian camp you can see red and green beads strung along the sides of the tepees, carried on the backs of little girls by means of a blanket, which is fastened at the waist with a leather belt, or being rolled to and fro by the wind in the boughs of the cottonwood trees. These beads are Indian crucifixes. Sometimes, if the man is going on a long journey in search of game or for water, or to escape a war party, two of these crucifixes are strung together by wool straps and swung over the back of a pony, one dangling on each side, like the baskets on a pack animal. But as a rule, the beads are for the men and boys to ride, and the papooses are either carried by the girls or packed away in a "traveller," which is the only way the Indians can

IMME, FELIX FAURE.

The Mistress of the House is Said to Be a Charismatic Woman.

We may say of the wife of the new president of the French republic, "like a fortunate country, she has no history." Mme. Felix Faure writes a correspondent of the gentleman, daughter of a solicitor and niece of Senator Ernest de Broque, in the department of Indre-et-Loire. On July 10, 1868, at the age of twenty-three years, she married the late M. Felix Faure. She is a beautiful brunette, with jet black hair and sparkling eyes.

Her daughters have blessed this union, and Antoinette, the younger, is wife of a mining engineer, Rene Berge, councillor-general of the Seine-et-Oise.

Although, as I have said, Mme. Felix Faure is but little known that does not mean she has not sympathized with her husband in his eventful life. Certainly the largely share of M. Faure's success is due to the helpful influence of his wife.

The home life of M. and Mme. Faure has always been charming. Mme. Faure is a very intelligent woman, and her wit and humor are proverbial. She does not care for the gay world, as she is a hearty lover of home, but she knows how to entertain with perfect grace. The social officers who attended her reception in the ministry were charmed with Mme. Faure's manner as a hostess, and all who know her say that she will be an ornament to the Elysee Palace. Mme. Faure always remains in her own apartment until noon, the hour for luncheon at a fourchette, but the president rises at 2 o'clock, and at 6 he is in his study. He then reads the documents left over from the previous evening, and after perusing them he smokes a cigar and reads the news of the day. Regularly at 10 minutes before 8 the president returns to his study, and at 8 o'clock he is ready to give audience or to work with his secretaries. Mme. Felix Faure is being greatly interested in her duties as "lady of the land" by her eldest daughter, Mlle. Lucie Faure, a very beautiful girl, 35 years old. Mlle. Lucie is like her mother, intelligent, witty, talented and very literary. She is fond of poetry, writes poems with great facility, and willingly recites them to her mother. Mme. Faure is often her father's secretary, and last year she accompanied him to Egypt, where both were very well received. As I have said, the second daughter is married. M. Berge, although by profession an engineer, does not practice his very wealthy and owns numerous properties near Havre. In winter M. and Mme. Berge live in a splendid flat at 12 Rue Pierre Charron, Paris. M. Berge is very much interested in agriculture and cattle raising. Because of their youth and enthusiasm, Mme. Berge is very much interested in the same. This is a decided change for the better, as these receptions were always very cold and formal.

THE LATE DON PEDRO.

British Consuls Regarded Him as the Bulldog of the Century.

By the members of the Bulldog Club of London and the "fancy" in general, Don Pedro was regarded as the bulldog of the century. If not of all time. As a stare his success has been phenomenal, and his blood flows in the veins of every prize winner of note of the present day. He was a small, stout, and fat man, with a large head, and although the fatness of his ribs (a bulldog should possess "barrel-shaped" ribs) prevented him from being a prizefighter, he was yet no champion that ever lived could beat him in cushion of muzzle and the "Chippendale chair-like" formation of the head, which, by the way, is the correct formation—the straight terrier-like-legged bulldogs so often seen being wrong.

Good Breeds, Well Applied.

That was a good breeder which an English bachelor is accredited with giving his sister, who wrote, asking him to pack up a governor for her children, enumerating the list of talents and virtues she would require, and a salary of $400 a year. "I'll look out for one, certainly," he wrote in reply, "that I find a lady all that you describe. I shall

PRINCE HOHENLOHE.

The Simple Domestic Life of the German Chancellor.

Feeding Crows to Hungry Birds is an Unfailing Part of His Daily Routine.

—He Eats Moderately of Very Plain Food.

The recent brilliant receptions at the Berlin chancellery have given the impression that Chancellor Prince Hohenlohe affects the style of the "grand seigneur," living in luxury and pomp. The truth is, however, that the prince, during the days of Bismarck and Caprivi, Count von Schoenborn-Wiesentheid, chief of the chancellor's special bureau, gives a few details of Prince Hohenlohe's daily life, which throw light on his personal tastes and inner character. The chancellor rises in winter at 7 and in summer much earlier. After coffee with a buttered roll he smokes a cigarette. At 7:30 he begins his work over the morning mail. He often scans his letters as he walks in the garden, at the same time scattering crumbs among the birds in the path. Pigeons, sparrows, and blackbirds gather round him when he sits down. They are quite tame, as he has made them his pets ever since he moved into Wilhelmstrasse. Sun or rain, cold or warm, he has not forgotten for a single day his engagement to feed them.

At 9 o'clock he goes to his workroom, the one from which Bismarck and Caprivi directed the affairs of the empire. The furniture has not been changed. It is the same as in the days of the iron chancellor and the old emperor. At 9:30 the daily official routine opens with the reports from the aids and the confidential secretaries. At 10 o'clock the press bureau brings forward and domestic newspaper clippings, pasted on official foolscap and so arranged as to convey the most favorable impression with the least weariness of spirit.

About 12:30 the ministers' half-hour for consultation with their chiefs begins. A minister whose business is not finished at 1 is invited to eat luncheon with the chancellor, who usually has at the table also the princes or other members of the Hohenlohe family. The meal consists of cold meats, eggs and tea. With his tea the chancellor takes another cigarette, after which he drives to the restaurant to remain until the adjournment. He passes only a small part of his time with the deputies, however. He works in his office, quite remote from the house, usually talking over state business with confidential officials and politicians.

He walks back to the chancellery, receives a fresh batch of official reports, and at 7:30 goes to the family dinner. The bill of fare is far from elaborate. After soup and fish comes the family dish known as "Bayrische rindfleisch und gemuese," plain boiled beef with vegetables. Sweets and cheese complete the meal. Various wines are served, but the chancellor drinks very sparingly of any one sort, usually limiting himself to a single glass of light Alsatian. A glass of beer after dinner and a cup of coffee with a big Havana cigar are the last items of his menu. He is not fond of social duties, and his room and resumes his labors with his interminable correspondence. At midnight he goes to bed.

It is a simple, hard-working life, varied only occasionally by receptions or court functions. The relief is not frequent and is not welcome, for the chancellor is not fond of social duties, and his room and resumes his labors with his interminable correspondence. At midnight he goes to bed.

Not only well along in life and aging noticeably under his new burdens the chancellor is still devoted to the pastime of walking. During his holidays he tramps across country, climbs mountain peaks, and hunts the clams. The reputation of the Hohenlohes as entertainers is preserved by the princess, whose grand balls and receptions maintain the traditions of an open and hospitable house.

Prince Alexander of Hohenlohe-Schillingfuerst, the chancellor's son, will marry the daughter princess of Ols-Braunau in June. She is eight years his senior.

Stank Farm in New York.

A big stank farm has been established in Tomkins county, N. Y., which expects next year to have a stock of 5,000 animals. Their food consists mostly of milk water and bits of meat, while their beds are made of chestnut leaves and dried grass in a large building. They are seen every day during the day, but come out at night fall and gambol about the yard. Beginning with the "kittens" they can be easily tamed. When they are time comes they are placed in a tight box and chloroformed, thus rendering their fur free from odor. Besides the fur, a fat animal will yield nearly a pint of oil, that is said to be an unequalled remedy for skin ailments.

The Whistler or Musical Tree.

The musical tree is a native of the West Indies, growing abundantly on all the islands of that group except Jamaica. It has a very peculiarly shaped pod which is split or open along the edge, and the wind whistling through the thousands of these shell-like pods produces the sound which gives the tree its name. A species of acacia, which grows very abundantly in the southern, is also called the "whistler."

IT'S VERY ENGLISH.

How the Weather and Wine Britons Live in Summer.

One of the features of life in England is the home life as a summer residence. Instead of wearing himself out and exhausting his purse by going to a watering place, your wealthy Englishman hires a tugboat to tow his floating home up the Thames, and rests him content, angling for fish that never bite and smoking. The inventor of the house boats is unknown. Encyclopedia is discreetly silent on the subject, and a careful research of long established English journals fails to find any mention of the term previous to 1834. In some inscrutable way, though, it has become known that a certain merchant, a performer in Bond street, London, made use of the first house boat in English waters as long ago as the year 1835. He adopted the idea of having a movable summer cottage on the waves, and he lodged his family in that unique fashion for several seasons without attracting any particular attention from his neighbors. Since that time house boats have become popular in England, and the Thames just above the capital is full of them, anchored all along the shore, sometimes so near together that the inmates walk across from one boat to the other, and a conveniently arranged passage way.

Recently a company has been organized in New York for the purpose of building and renting house boats.

How a Lion Was Killed Down. In St. Paul an army officer was entertaining a party of friends to dinner, and among them was a civilian who was an entertaining story teller, but who, anchored all along the shore, sometimes so near together that the inmates walk across from one boat to the other, and a conveniently arranged passage way. An awful cyclone swept over several towns in Iowa Tuesday night, sixty lives were lost. Sioux Center, Doon, Perkins and Sibley were the towns hurt worst. Near the first named, three school houses were demolished and several children killed in each. All over the state heavy rains fell with much damage from winds.

A decision handed down by the Court of Appeals Saturday declares the Louisville tax ordinance of 1894 unconstitutional, because exempting from ad valorem taxation certain personal property upon which a license tax had been paid. The property affected is personally employed in business—mercantile stocks, bank capital, etc.

The Outworn are Bad.

Several farmers were standing together on the street Saturday when a Kentuckian representative walked up and casually inquired if there were any out worn this season.

"Out worn?" Well I should say so," remarked one of them. They have cleaned up my garden, my cornfield and have now started on my clover. Never saw 'em as bad in my life.

"Yes they are pretty bad this season," said Charlie Knight. I have found as many as two dozen in one hill of corn and under one mule stalk I pulled up I counted 139 of all ages, sizes and sexes."

At this stage Mr. J. D. Shepherd put in a word. "Mind you, I don't say I saw this, but I hear one of my neighbors say that he killed up a piece of ground late one evening for cabbage and when he went to plant the cabbage next morning, his hills were gone. They had crawled away."

This reminded John Van Cleave of the experience of one of his neighbors, whose name we failed to catch. He said a piece of corn land was laid off and the next morning the ground appeared perfectly level and smooth. The worms in their eagerness to be time had taken possession of the rows until they were filled up level with the ground.

Mr. Shepherd said the worms in that case might have been mashed by a log and used to enrich the soil. It would have saved buying fertilizers.

OBITUARY.

Died at his home near Bell, Ky., Apr. 29, 1895; Horea B. Waddy of heart failure. He had been sick only a week with a complication of diseases, but had not seemed dangerous till he died. He proved too much for his frail form. He was born June 5, 1825, was twice married, his first consort being Miss Mary Quisenberry who lived only a short time. Noble died survived fifteen years. Afterward he married Miss S. C. Radford; four children blessed this union and survive him. His wife long ago preceded him to the "City not made with human hands." "That death loves a shining mark," has again been verified; as he was in many respects a remarkable man, a man of strong will power, great strength of character, indomitable energy and a successful business man. To say that he will be missed sadly expresses it.

The presence and sorrow of the strong bore eloquent testimony of the high esteem in which he was held. The funeral procession was the largest seen here for many years, being fully three quarters of a mile long.

He will be missed in the little school house prayer meetings weekly held near his home for eight years, being a constant attendant; although he took no active part, his influence, his deep interest showed how much he loved the Lord's work.

He had been an exemplary member of Locust Grove Baptist church for many years and was deacon at the time of his death. He loved his church devotedly, and thought a lot, as a constant attendant; although he took no active part, his influence, his deep interest showed how much he loved the Lord's work.

The funeral services were conducted by Revs. T. S. McCall and W. H. Vaughan. "If He Die Shall He Live Again" being chosen for the theme text.

The services were impressive and appropriate. One Who Loved Him.

Largest Steer in the World.

There arrived at the West Philadelphia stock yards on Friday what is claimed to be the largest steer in the world.

The animal, which weighs within a fraction of two tons, is five years old, and was raised near Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county. It is of the Durham variety. A special car was provided for the transportation of the monster beast.

The animal is so large, fat and clumsy that after lying down it is with great difficulty that it manages to stand up again, and usually requires the assistance of a gang of cattlemen.

The master looked indignantly doleful, and asked to know the reason, to which it answers when spoken to by its keeper, "Dick" is now on exhibition at the stock yards and will be until Tuesday, when it will cease to be the largest steer alive.

On that day "Dick" will be transformed into about a ton and a quarter or dressed beef.

The official records of the abattoir show that "Dick" is the largest beef that has arrived there in thirty years.—Philadelphia Record.

The Lid Stuck On.

Among stories told by country doctors this one certainly deserves a place. The doctor had prescribed for an Irishman, and visited his cabin the next day to see how he was getting on.

"Well, Patrick, are you better today?" he asked, pleasantly.

"Oh, no, doctor, I'm worse, with terrible pain in me innards."

"Why didn't you take the pills I ordered?"

"I did that, an' I'm worse; but maybe the cover hasn't come off the box yet!"—Youth's Companion.

Queer Bible Exposition.

Matthew Henry's commentary on the Bible was written for the common people and in the slang of the day. In commenting on Judges ix, he says:

"We are here told by what acts Abimelech got into the saddle. He hired for his service all the scoundrels and scoundrels of the country. Jotham was really a fine gentleman. The Sackemites were the first to kick him off. They said all the fill they could get him in their table talk. They drank health to his confusion."

—N. Y. Journal.

Soda Propelled Engines.

A fireless locomotive engine was recently used on the Aix-in-Chapelle railway. The motor power is derived from soda. The invention is based on the principle that solutions of caustic soda, which have highly boiling points, liberate heat while absorbing steam. These engines eject neither smoke nor steam and work noiselessly. Compared with coal-burning locomotives, soda engines show a capacity equal to the former, while they are worked with greater ease and simplicity.

The custom of using blinkers on belated horses, though handed down from generation to generation, is rapidly passing away.

BASE BALL NOTES.

Hopkinsville is again in the swim. The public will be treated to two games of ball this week with Henderson, a team composed of nice and capable young men. It is useless to say anything concerning our team for the management has collected together out of Louisville and Nashville, a team that we credit to any town or city. Henderson is a strong aggregation of ball tossers and a good game may be expected. Be sure and come with a victorious voice and let's win the first series.

Our team lines up as follows: Hard, catcher; Schmidt and Leason, pitchers; Wornack, 2nd base; Richardson, 3rd base; Thorpe, short stop; Stoner Morris, 3d base; Ashford, left field; A. Ward, centre field; Schmidt and Leason, right field. With these superb tossers we can depend on two thirds of the games. This season will be the best season ever witnessed. Shall we have the "big" from our neighbors—Clarkville.

Wornack, as we all know, has the championship of all semi-professional first basemen. As a base runner he has few equals. A good batter and coacher also.

Ashford we do not know much about, but he comes highly recommended from Vanderhill University.

Hard as we all know is a good catcher and with Richardson to help him out, there is little danger in being in need of catchers.

Schmidt and Leason are two good twirlers and have good cures and tremendous speed.

Thorpe is a good and reliable short stop, and a heavy batter. He too comes highly recommended.

Richardson was Clarksville's second baseman last year and is a hard hitter and an all around good player.

With the home boys, S. Morris, A. Ward and J. Morris, we have a good team.

The management hasn't decided who they would like captain yet, but they will select the best man for the position.

The games this week will be played Thursday and Friday, and will be called at 3 p. m. sharp. It is safe to say that large crowds will witness both games.

The games of ball played last Thursday and Friday between the Auburn team and the local team resulted in a draw. On Thursday our home team won by a score of 17 to 15, and Friday the Auburn boys were victorious, the score being 18 to 14. The games were not as well attended as they should have been, as there was some very good playing on both sides. The visiting team left for their home after the game Friday.

Free Medical Aid.

M. Felix Faure has decided that all the state and other domestics at the Ellysee and their families are to receive medical assistance gratis, says the London Daily News. The cost is to be paid out of his own purse. All the niggers and other servants employed there by the state have been nearly thirty years at the Ellysee. They have been kept on longer than they might have been, because it would be so difficult to find men so fit for their places. They cannot be dismissed before a certain number of years' service has given them a right to a pension. Since influenza visited Paris, in 1893, they have often suffered from that illness, and being old, had often to seek medical assistance. As their salaries are not high, they thought this was hard, and so also thinks the president. M. Faure has named Capt. Bouches to look after them and to be their spokesman.

A Shy Author.

Mary E. Wilkins, the story writer, is so shy in general society, that it is the general verdict among the Boston and New York literary circles that no one is acquainted with her. She is a shy person and is not social.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and leads to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adopting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to the presence in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative, effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.
